

SOC350 Regional Welfare

1st and 2nd quarters, Junior

Instructor	KAWARAI NOBORU
Style of Class	Lecture
Number of Credits	2
Day and Period	To be advised

Course Description

This course involves study of the principles and history of regional welfare and its legal frameworks such as long-term care insurance, followed by study of matters including models for welfare services to improve the living environments of those in need of assistance in the community, the resources and infrastructure that underpin such services, and approaches to welfare needs and service coordination. Students will also deepen their understanding of the current conditions and challenges in the organization of regional networks encompassing parties such as local government, medical corporations, social welfare corporations, NPOs, and resident volunteers, which are essential for the advancement of regional welfare.

Course Objectives

Prerequisites

Class Materials

Course Method

Evaluation/Assessment

Grading

Course Schedule

Preparation and Follow-up
